Distance & Displacement

- Distance: Total path length of motion or travel. Add together all segments of motion.
- Displacement: The absolute change in position. The straight-line difference in position between the end of motion (where you ended) and start of motion (where you started). Displacement is a vector. For linear motion, add vectors using + and - values for directions. For 2-dimensional motion, use the Pythagorean Theorem.

For each motion, solve for the distance (d) and the displacement (Δx). The motion always starts at the house. Distance and displacement are evaluated from the start (house). Displacement must have a direction.
