

Softball Unit

Study Guide

Objective: Softball is played by two teams of nine players each who try to score more runs than their opponent by rounding the bases and crossing home plate as many times as possible in a seven-inning game. Fastpitch softball teams consist of nine players from one team on the field at a time, while slowpitch softball is played with ten fielders.

Rules and Regulations:

An official game is seven innings (when both teams have had their turns at bat). Innings are divided into two halves, referred to as the top of and the bottom of the inning.

Each team bats once in each inning on opposite sides of the field. There are three outs for each team per inning.

There is a batter's box on both sides of home plate. The batter may choose which side of the plate to hit from, but his feet must be inside the box.

A strike is called when a pitch is swung at and missed, the ball is hit into foul territory, or the pitcher does not swing at a ball that enters the strike zone. A foul ball only counts as a strike for the first and second strike. The batter is out after three strikes.

The strike zone is an imaginary rectangle of space above home plate between the batter's ankles and the knee to a crouched-in natural batting stance.

A batter becomes a base runner upon hitting a fair ball, after four balls are called, after being hit by a pitched ball, or if the catcher interferes.

Down the first and third baseline is a foul area. Once the ball crosses the foul line before it bounces, the ball is termed "dead" and play restarts with a new pitch.

A batter or runner is out in the following situations: if the ball the batter has just hit is caught without first bouncing, if the ball is thrown to a base before the runner gets there, if a play is running between bases is tagged by the ball (touched by the ball or the glove of the defending player), if three out tags are called by the umpire, or if the runner is more than 3 feet (0.9m) from the baseline to avoid being tagged.
