Pant,2015-10-06 India has the world s fourth largest military and one of the biggest defence budgets It asserts its political and military profile in South Asia and the Indian Ocean region The nation has been in the midst of an ambitious plan to modernize its largely Soviet era arms since the late 1990s and has spent billions of dollars on latest high tech military technology This handbook canvasses over 60 years of Indian defence policy and the major debates that have shaped it discusses several key themes such as the origins of the modern armed forces in India military doctrine and policy internal and external challenges and nuclearization and its consequences includes contributions by well known scholars experts in the field and policymakers and provides an annotated bibliography for further research Presented in an accessible format this lucidly written handbook will be an indispensable resource for scholars and researchers of security and defence studies international relations and political science as well as for government think tanks and policymakers Report - Government of India, Ministry of Defence India. Ministry of Defence,2006 Arming without Aiming Stephen P. Cohen,Sunil Dasgupta,2010-08-01 India s growing affluence has led experts to predict a major rearmament effort The second most populous nation in the world is beginning to wield the economic power expected of such a behemoth Its border with Pakistan is a tinderbox the subcontinent remains vulnerable to religious extremism and a military rivalry between India and China could erupt in the future India has long had the motivation for modernizing its military it now has the resources as well What should we expect to see in the future and what will be the likely ramifications In Arming without Aiming Stephen Cohen and Sunil Dasgupta answer those crucial questions India s armed forces want new weapons worth more than 100 billion But most of these weapons must come from foreign suppliers due to the failures of India s indigenous research and development Weapons suppliers from other nations are queuing up in New Delhi A long relationship between India and Russian manufacturers goes back to the cold war More recently India and Israel have developed strong military trade ties Now a new military relationship with the United States has generated the greatest hope for military transformation in India Against this backdrop of new affluence and newfound access to foreign military technology Cohen and Dasgupta investigate India s military modernization to find haphazard military change that lacks political direction suffers from balkanization of military organization and doctrine remains limited by narrow prospective planning and is driven by the pursuit of technology free from military strategic objectives The character of military change in India especially the dysfunction in the political military establishment with regard to procurement is ultimately the result of a historical doctrine of strategic restraint in place since Nehru In that context its approach of arming without strategic purpose remains viable as India seeks great power
