

35 | THE NERVOUS SYSTEM

Figure 35.1 An athlete's nervous system is hard at work during the planning and execution of a movement as precise as a high jump. Parts of the nervous system are involved in determining how hard to push off and when to turn, as well as controlling the muscles throughout the body that make this complicated movement possible without knocking the bar down—all in just a few seconds. Chapter Outline

- 35.1: Neurons and Glial Cells
- 35.2: How Neurons Communicate
- 35.3: The Central Nervous System
- 35.4: The Peripheral Nervous System
- 35.5: Nervous System Disorders

Introduction

When you're reading this book, your nervous system is performing several functions simultaneously. The visual system is processing what is seen on the page; the motor system controls the turn of the pages (or click of the mouse); the prefrontal cortex maintains attention. Even fundamental functions, like breathing and regulation of body temperature, are controlled by the nervous system. A nervous system is an organism's control center: it processes sensory information from outside (and inside) the body and controls all behaviors—from eating to sleeping to finding a mate.

35.1 | Neurons and Glial Cells

By the end of this section, you will be able to:

- List and describe the functions of the structural components of a neuron
- List and describe the four main types of neurons
- Compare the functions of different types of glial cells
