

CHAPTER 3

Cost-Estimation Techniques

The objective of Chapter 3 is to present an assortment of methods for estimating important factors in an engineering economy study.

The High Cost of Office Rental Space

In 2008, your multinational firm needs to acquire a total of 50,000 square feet of additional office space in London, Hong Kong, and New York City. You have been tasked with developing a cost estimate for 20,000 square feet of space in London, 10,000 square feet of space in Hong Kong, and 20,000 square feet of space in New York City. While researching this topic, you find an article in USA Today (April 10, 2007, page B-1) that provides the following annual cost estimates per square foot of rental space in the three cities: London, $233.57; Hong Kong, $201.29; and New York City, $175.00. How much should your firm expect to pay per year for the 50,000 square feet of office space? In Chapter 3, you will learn about several techniques that are highly useful in estimating the costs of engineering projects.
