

American History: The Cold War

4 pages | 871 words

The Cold War was a period of tense rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union. It took place after World War II as differences between the U.S. and the Soviet Union continued to escalate. Much of the disagreement came from not agreeing on what would happen to postwar Europe. Winston Churchill's famous "Iron Curtain" speech is said to have been one of the main factors announcing the Cold War's start. Joseph Stalin, a Soviet politician, swiftly responded to Churchill's speech defending the Soviet Union. However, before analyzing Churchill's speech and Stalin's response, one must first look at what actions and policies exactly led to the Cold War. Eastern Europe was a central area of disagreement between the two sides. The U.S. valued self-determination and democratic freedom, while the Soviets feared free elections since it could lead to traditional Anti-Soviet attitudes (Spielvogel 864). Another contributing factor was the U.S.'s foreign policy, known as the Truman Doctrine. This policy stated that the United States would financially assist any country claiming to be endangered by Communist expansion. It was the U.S.'s response to potential Soviet expansion and consequently, the spread of communism, into the free world. Another contributing factor was Europe's Recovery program known as the Marshall Plan, which provided substantial funding for Europe's economic recovery post-war. The Soviet Union was not included in the plan while benefitting the U.S. since loans were paid to ensure Europe regained its economic and political independence (Spielvogel 866). Finally, George Kennan, a well-known American diplomat with extensive knowledge regarding Soviet affairs, supported a policy of containment in America against additional forceful Soviet moves. Thus, the U.S. utilized counteraction to correspond to the Soviet's movements. Winston Churchill's "Iron Curtain" speech is said to have announced the start of the Cold War. Through his words, Churchill stresses the belief that Eastern Europe is in the "Soviet Sphere" and therefore controlled by the Soviets ("Winston Churchill Speech – Iron Curtain"). Further, he discusses the Russian government making mass removals of Germans and the Communist parties actively seeking complete control. Additionally, he discusses the Soviet government's quest to create a Pro-Communist Germany in areas that will cause significant issues for America and Britain. With this, Churchill explains that individuals must fight for the Europe they wanted. A place with lasting unity to ensure safety for all. Churchill believes that a settlement is needed, sooner rather than later, since the danger is continuously rising. He believes that a policy recommending a balance of power is not the answer nor is one of appeasement ("Winston Churchill Speech – Iron Curtain"). Instead, he believed that Americans must stand together abiding strictly by its principles. They must not contribute temptation to any of Russia's strengths, to ensure no harm comes to the United States. In response to Churchill's speech, Joseph Stalin stated that Churchill had consistently spoken in favor of English-speaking nations. Churchill asserted that only they should have the power to rule over all other nations ("Joseph Stalin: Reply to Churchill, 1946"). Stalin believes Churchill presented such an idea as an ultimatum that would end in war if not followed. On another note, Stalin confidently...
