

Chapter 7

Evaluating Information: Validity, Reliability, Accuracy, Triangulation

Teaching and learning objectives:

1. To consider why information should be assessed
2. To understand the distinction between 'primary' and 'secondary sources' of information
3. To learn what is meant by the validity, reliability, and accuracy of information
4. To consider some warnings about 'official data'
5. To consider further the distinction between 'facts' and 'truth'
6. To understand the origin of triangulation and its application to research
7. To consider methods of sampling which can be used to collect data.

"Do not feel absolutely certain of anything".

Introduction

In Chapter 6, you read how published research reports can be assessed. The research component analysis and Rose's ABCDE model examined the completeness and coherence of the research process adopted. They also considered the validity or otherwise of the relationships between theory and hypothesis, concepts and indicators, empiric data and analysis, and conclusions. Research essentially involves the gathering or collection of data that addresses the research question and enables theory to be tested or developed. So the data from which answers to the research question are to be drawn must be appropriate in terms of its relevance and efficacy — 'fitness for purpose'. Much of this information will be drawn from published sources
