

Climate Change Science
Unit 1: Introduction to Climate Science
1. Introduction to Climate

Climate is the average weather conditions over a long period of time. It is determined by the amount of solar radiation that the Earth receives and the amount of heat that the Earth loses to space.

1.1. The Greenhouse Effect is a process by which the atmosphere warms the Earth's surface. The sun's rays heat the Earth's surface, which then radiates heat back into the atmosphere. The atmosphere traps some of this heat, warming the Earth's surface.

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the sun's rays hit the Earth, they heat the Earth's surface. The surface then radiates heat towards the sky in the form of infrared radiation. In the atmosphere, greenhouse gases (such as carbon dioxide) trap some of this heat and re-radiate it back to the Earth's surface, warming the planet.

1.2. The Water Cycle is a process by which water moves through the atmosphere, land, and oceans. It is a continuous cycle that is essential for life on Earth.

The water cycle is a continuous process by which water moves through the atmosphere, land, and oceans. It is a cycle that is essential for life on Earth. The sun's energy causes water to evaporate from the oceans and transpire from plants. The water vapor then rises into the atmosphere, where it cools and condenses into clouds. The clouds release precipitation in the form of rain or snow. The water then flows back to the oceans or infiltrates the ground, where it can be used by plants and animals.
