

ARGUING A POSITION

Introduction

1. Envision a future devoid of mental illness, disease, ugliness, and suffering. Every family epitomizes perfection; the children are beautiful and intelligent, and their parents are proud and grateful. No individual has any glaring health conditions, and everyone is content. This seemingly utopian future may not be possible for a while or ever, but many fear that manipulating human genetics will spawn a society where only the wealthy can afford to treat and prevent illnesses and artificially bear children with superior traits.

1. Analyzing and experimenting with human genetics can potentially develop treatments for diseases that severely impact the lives of many individuals.
2. Include and condense quote: "Also during the 1990s, scientists began testing a form of gene therapy, using a harmless virus to shuttle a healthy gene into cells or tissue to override or replace a disease-causing gene. In 1990, scientists conducted the first successful gene therapy trial, aimed at improving the immune systems of children born with severe combined immune deficiency, a fatal condition caused by genetic mutations in the infection-fighting immune cells" (Glazer)
3. Gene therapy was conducted with the intent to benefit humanity, not to destroy it. Scientists were collaborating in order to prevent a fatal condition in young children to prevent them and their impacted families from suffering. If the modification of human genes is banned worldwide, several adolescents
