

Chapter Review

In males, spermatogenesis occurring in seminiferous tubules of the testes produces sperm that mature in the epididymides and may be stored in the vasa deferentia before entering the vasa deferentia, along with the secretions produced by seminal vesicles, the prostate gland, and Cowper's (bulbourethral) glands. Semen is ejaculated during male orgasm, when the penis is erect.

Hormonal regulation, involving secretions from the hypothalamus, the anterior pituitary, and the testes, maintains testosterone produced by the interstitial cells of the testes at a fairly constant level.

In females, an egg produced by an ovary enters an oviduct, which leads to the uterus. The uterus opens into the vagina. The external genital area includes the vaginal opening, the clitoris, the labia minora, and the labia majora.

In the non-pregnant female, the ovarian and uterine cycles, are under hormonal control of the hypothalamus, anterior pituitary, and the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone.

If fertilization occurs, the corpus luteum is maintained because of progesterone production. Progesterone production does not cease, and the embryo implants itself in the thick endometrial lining.

Estrogen and progesterone maintain the secondary sex characteristics of females, including less body hair than males, a wider pelvic girdle, a more rounded appearance, and development of breasts.

Infertile couples are increasingly resorting to alternative methods of reproduction. Numerous birth-control methods and devices are available for those who wish to prevent pregnancy.

Sexually transmitted diseases include genital; herpes, which repeatedly flares up; genital warts, which lead to cancer of the cervix; gonorrhea and chlamydia, which cause pelvic inflammatory disease (PID); and syphilis, which has cardiovascular and neurological complications if untreated.

Study Questions

Concept: The male reproductive system is designed for the continuous production of a large number of sperm within a fluid medium.

1. The male gonads are paired testes found in the scrotum. If the testes do not descend during development, sterility (inability to produce offspring) results due to the higher body temperature. Sperm produced by the testes mature within the epididymides (sing., epididymis) and are propelled into the vasa deferentia (sing., vas deferens) by muscular contractions.
2. The penis contains a spongy, erectile tissue that can fill with blood during sexual arousal. The condition in which the penis fails to become erect is called impotency. Semen is a thick, whitish fluid that contains sperm and fluids. Each seminal vesicle joins a vas deferens to form an ejaculatory duct that enters the
