What Shape is Your Parachute?

PROBLEM

What shape of parachute will allow it to fall the slowest?

HYPOTHESIS

I think that a square parachute will fall the slowest because it has the most surface area. I also think that a circular parachute will fall the slowest because it is round and has a lot of surface area. I think that a rectangular parachute will fall the slowest because it is flat and has a lot of surface area.

MATERIALS

String, paper, tape, weights, stopwatch, ruler, scissors, glue.

PROCEDURE

1. Cut the material to the appropriate shape and size of the paper parachute.
2. Use the string to make four loops to hold the parachute to the weight.
3. Cut 16 pieces of string, each 10cm long, and tie one end of each string to the corners of the parachute.
4. Tie the other end of each string to a weight that will hold the parachute in the air.
5. Use the stopwatch to time how long it takes for the parachute to fall.
6. Repeat the process.

GRAPHS

DATA

Time taken for square parachute to fall: 1.2 seconds
Time taken for circular parachute to fall: 1.5 seconds
Time taken for rectangular parachute to fall: 1.8 seconds

CONCLUSION

The rectangular parachute fell the slowest, followed by the circular parachute, and then the square parachute. This supports my hypothesis that a rectangular parachute would fall the slowest.
