Gabe couldn't understand why nobody would believe him. Sure, he had told a few small lies and tall tales every now and then, but who didn't? He laughed as he thought of some of the stories he had made up. A UFO floating over his house, the huge werewolf in the forest, and a glowing rock were just a few of the great stories he had told his friends. Now, here he was, telling the truth, and nobody believed him, he HAD seen a ghost. He really, truly had. As he had walked from his house to the barn, a bright ghostly figure appeared out of nowhere. It floated toward Gabe. As it approached him, Gabe realized it was an actual ghost. The figure looked into Gabe's eyes, circled him, and then disappeared into the shadows. How sad it was that nobody was willing to believe him. Gabe blinked back his tears as he realized he should have never told those other lies and tall tales.

Which statement best describes the theme of this passage?
