12.1 INTRODUCTION

Three-phase controlled rectifiers have a wide range of applications, from small rectifiers to large High Voltage Direct Current (HVDC) transmission systems. They are used for electro-chemical process, many kinds of motor drives, traction equipment, controlled power supplies, and many other applications. From the point of view of the commutation process, they can be classified in two important categories: Line Commutated Controlled Rectifiers (Thyristor Rectifiers), and Force Commutated PWM Rectifiers.

12.2 LINE COMMUTATED CONTROLLED RECTIFIERS.

12.2.1 Three-phase half-wave rectifier

The figure 12.1 shows the three-phase half-wave rectifier topology. To control the load voltage, the half wave rectifier uses three, common-cathode thyristor arrangement. In this figure, the power supply, and the transformer are assumed ideal. The thyristor will conduct (ON state), when the anode-to-cathode voltage  $v_{AK}$  is positive, and a firing current pulse  $i_g$  is applied to the gate terminal. Delaying the firing pulse by an angle  $\alpha$  does the control of the load voltage. The firing angle  $\alpha$  is measured from the crossing point between the phase supply voltages, as shown in figure 12.2. At that point, the anode-to-cathode thyristor voltage  $v_{AK}$  begins to be positive. The figure 12.3 shows that the possible range for gating delay is between  $\alpha=0^\circ$  and  $\alpha=180^\circ$ , but in real situations, because of commutation problems, the maximum firing angle is limited to around  $160^\circ$ . In figure 12.4, when the load is resistive, the current  $i_d$  has the same waveform of the load voltage. As the load becomes more and more inductive, the current flattens and finally becomes constant. The thyristor goes to the non-conducting condition (OFF state) when the following thyristor is switched ON, or the current, tries to reach a negative value.

With the help of figure 12.2, the load average voltage can be evaluated, and is given by:

$$V_D = \frac{V_{max}}{2\pi} \int_{\frac{\pi}{3} + \alpha}^{\frac{2\pi}{3} + \alpha} \cos \omega t \, d(\omega t) = V_{max} \frac{\sin \frac{\pi}{3}}{\frac{\pi}{3}} \cos \alpha = 1.17 V_{T-N} \cos \alpha \quad (12.1)$$
